 Initial contact with Ms. Rimal

Ms. Rimal is ideally seeking part-time positions as she is working on her doctorate and would like to find something that compliments her clinic hours for this program. She notes that she will be unavailable on Mondays and Wednesdays as these are her clinic days for the doctoral program. She would otherwise be open to exploring the opportunities available to her. With this said, she would prefer to be on-site in a practice where she would have good team support.

Ms. Rimal notes that she went through a psychiatric rotation during her bachelor's program and found it compelling. She is drawn to the deep commitment a psychiatric and mental health practitioner makes to caring for their patients. It is a deep and long commitment that she finds rewarding and engaging which continues to drive her in her work.

Professionally, Ms. Rimal offers that she has always had great interactions and rapport with patients. Through patient feedback, she has always been complimented and praised for the care and attention she gives. This is a source of pride for her as well as a testament to her dedication. She adds that she goes to work each day with the commitment to her patients and serving the community as the motivation for everything she does.

Ms. Rimal is ready to discuss opportunities and can be reached through phone call as well as email. She can be available for both virtual and in-person meetings with adequate notice as well.
